

Laly Llama

The Power of Observation: Being a Hero in the City 💖

Have you ever noticed that life in a big city moves very fast? People are always rushing to catch a bus or a train. In the middle of all that noise, we have a very important mission: to practice empathy. Empathy is the ability to recognize the needs of others and take action to help them.

When you are traveling on public transport, keep your eyes open. You might see an elderly person who is tired, a pregnant woman who needs extra space, or someone with a physical disability who finds it difficult to stay steady while the bus is moving. Even if you are tired too, standing up and offering your seat is a sign of great character.

These small acts of kindness are what build a respectful community. By putting yourself in someone else's position, you make their day easier and safer. Remember, being a leader doesn't mean being the first one to sit down; it means being the first one to care!

Reading Comprehension Questions:

- . How is empathy defined in the text?.....
- . Why is it important to offer a seat even if you are tired?.....
- . What does it mean to "put yourself in someone else's position"?.....